Apparently No Hope for the Underground Route Now.

The Commissioners Will Consider Another Plan This Afternoon.

Counsellor John M. Bowers's opinion in the validity of the Wilson syndicate scheme seems to have had the effect of a cold water sousing on underground.

Commissioners have for the elevated lines.

Commissioners where the property of the Cathedral, St. Luke's Hospital, columbia College, or any of the elegaboring avenues where the property of the Cathedral, St. Luke's Hospital, columbia College, or any of the other public institution is situated, has been so far developed that a feasible route has been suggested.

There was no one in the bake shop at the time, and the lammes spread through the base men before an approach of the time, and the lammes spread through the base on the content of the conjunction of the time, and the lammes spread through the base of the rouse in the block on the route of the conjunction of the time, and the lammes spread through the block on the coth elect through the block on the north side of One Hundred and Sinth street, curving there exists the spread of the conjunction of the time, and the lammes spread through the block on the north side of One Hundred and Tenth to One Hundred a street to One Hundred and Thirty-mint street, emerging at One Hundred and Fortleth street. From this point the route out Tenth avenue to Fort George would proceed over an ordinary elevated structure. The maximum grade would

MUST PAY FOR INTERFERING.

Bautch will also have to defend a civil suit for damages next week. He overheard, a few nights ago, William Luckey and his aweetheart, Miss Hattle Crane, planning a secret marriage under his restaurant windows.

Shocked by what he heard, Bautch threw a large bucket of slops from his second-story window over the couple drenching them from head to foot, and ruining their best clothes. He added insult to injury by asking them: "How do you like that dose."

The deluge did not dampen the ardor of the loving couple, for they were married Sundaynight and are now living with the bridegroom's mother. They are the plaintiffs in the suits against Bautch.
